Jan 03, 2017 The future for Indonesia's economy lies in green industries. the poor condition of Indonesian green industries, and a large gap in technological expertise for large-scale, sustainable industries is the main problem facing the country's economy. Indonesia's green growth is only expected to reach 7.7 percent by the year 2020, according to the latest Indonesian Investment Opportunities. Achieving this target is only possible through ensuring the country's green growth progresses quickly. Indonesia's economic growth is expected to rise to 6 percent in the year. The government is also focusing on ensuring the country's economic growth target of 6 percent is achieved as early as possible.
