Siddhartha Gautama (Vidura) son of King Kaus'a (Kaus'a II) was born in Lumbini in Nepal. He was the idealist who sought inner freedom. It is claimed that he appeared in three previous births in different countries. Some writers have identified him with the Chinese monk Ārúta (Aratus) of the 2nd century BC, however, this connection is questionable. Vidura was a great philosopher, and a son of King Kaus'a (Kaus'a II). He was born in the time of King Kaus'a of Lumbini, and was the idealist, who sought inner freedom. It is claimed that he appeared in three previous births in different countries. He was a disciple of the Buddha and was sent as envoy to the court of the King Gautama Buddha (Siddhartha Gautama) who was his elder brother. He was sent to preach the great path of the Middle Way and to dissuade Gautama Buddha from undertaking an earthly life. At last he succeeded in persuading Gautama Buddha to embark on a path of self-redemption. He was sent to the court of Gautama Buddha who was his elder brother and was again sent to dissuade Gautama Buddha from undertaking an earthly life. Vidura was a great philosopher and a son of King Kaus'a. He was born in the time of King Kaus'a of Lumbini. He was the idealist
