The pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of orally administered diazepam, clobazam, and clonazepam were studied in women with intact feedback regulation of blood pressure. The study was double blind, randomized, crossover design with a 2-week wash-out period between treatments. Six healthy nonpregnant female volunteers received orally, on three separate occasions, a single dose of diazepam (10 mg), clobazam (200 mg), or clonazepam (1.25 mg) during three separate 8-day treatment periods. The treatments were separated by a 2-week wash-out period. Three blood samples were drawn at preselected time intervals after drug administration. Systolic blood pressure (SBP) was determined before drug administration and 2 h, 2 days, 3 days, 5 days, and 7 days after drug administration. Diazepam and clobazam increased plasma concentrations (p Courtesy of MLB.com | Subscribe to The Action Network on YouTube: Click here for the latest breaking news on every team and every player: World champion St. Louis Cardinals.
