The game of baseball requires a series of events and precautions when played to ensure that a ball is not hit to the ground. Other than the obvious objects such as the bat and the ball, a baseball game requires a number of other components and these are a pitcher, a batter, a catcher, a home plate, a home run and an out field. Baseball is different from cricket in that the area in which the ball is hit is not so important. Baseball has been around for a long time and has gone through a number of changes. The earliest version of the sport was known as rounders. In these days players would play the game using a small round ball that had a circumference that is around three inches. This form of the game was introduced in 1624 and the game was referred to as the game of rounders. By 1745 the game had been invented and the basic elements of a baseball game were established. Other than the introduction of the baseball, the game of rounders played a major role in the development of baseball. Between the years of 1869 and 1871 the game of rounders was replaced by the game of baseball, which eventually became the sport we know today. The early version of the game was designed by the American Christian Eady. He called this new game that he invented the game of rounders, however the general public called it the game of shiny, as the ball looked like a round stick. The first game of baseball was played in 1870 and it was played in the New York area. Playing the game in the early days was very rough and was accompanied by being injured and dying. In 1871 the first game of baseball was officially organized as a sport and by 1875 the game became a professional sport. Throughout the 19th century baseball developed further, as a number of features were added to the sport. One major change was the introduction of the designated hitter. The game of baseball was originally designed for two teams of eleven men per side. The designated hitter
