SE-TrayMenu is a software tool developed specifically to aid individuals gain faster access to particular apps, directories, URLs and commands. The interface has a plain and intuitive design, which allows all user categories to easily find their way around it, without experiencing difficulties. Aside from that, it is fairly non-obtrusive, as it goes in the system tray from the first launch. Hovering over the systray icon brings up a pop-up menu, bundled with most used items, while right-clicking it opens a context menu which enables you to view information about the developer, close the utility and access the settings panel. The latter lets you add executables, folders, internet links, apps from Start menu/screen or frequently used ones to the aforementioned popup menu. Entries can be sorted alphabetically, removed or edited, in the sense that you can change the title and path, input arguments and assign a keyboard shortcut. Furthermore, it is possible to change the language, launch this software program at Windows startup, assign a hotkey, and customize the layout, as you can select another pattern, and define column number, image size, text alignment, window borders and margins. The color theme can also be modified, by choosing a predefined style from a built-in list or by tweaking each option manually. Seeing it is perceived as a background process, we can safely say the computer's performance is not hindered by this tool. To conclude, SE-TrayMenu proves to be an efficient piece of software, when it comes to creating a method of accessing particular items faster. It has a intuitive and non-obtrusive environment, a good response time and sufficient options for both power and novice users. If you want to skip the installation process, give the portable version a try. Repair of a large inguinal hernia by insertion of a polypropylene mesh prosthesis (Prolene) in the sub-aponeurotic space. A method for the correction of large inguinal hernias is described with the use of a polypropylene non-resorbable mesh prosthesis (Prolene) fitted in the subaponeurotic space following local fascia lata transection. In this way, a tension-free repair of the inguinal canal is achieved. Experience is reported with 14 cases over a period of 9 months with follow-up observation of the patients 1 year after the operation./* *
