

“The first aim of bringing in HyperMotion Technology was to create AI-controlled teammates,” said Bryan Pontard, Manager of Player Development at EA SPORTS FIFA. “The technology has enabled us to make the AI players work much more dynamically in natural player movements and responses to situations.” By analyzing the players’ positions, speeds, contact and aerials, the team’s AI understands exactly what each player has the capacity to do. An AI teammate will then make intelligent decisions based on their skills and abilities, going where their teammates are going, avoiding the opponents, making and tackling the right kind of pass and intercepting the ball from where it’s lost to the opposition. An object’s movement and movement during interception will vary according to situations. So, an AI teammate will react to tackles at different pace, intercept the ball on the ground or when it’s clear on the air. “We’re thrilled to be able to use the motion data to create a type of dynamic AI interaction in the game,” said Yuval Grossman, Senior Producer at EA SPORTS FIFA. “The game will become more challenging and tactical.” The motion capture session during which the players captured the data was completed on October 1st, 2018 at the University of Auckland in New Zealand, and at the Beijing Training Ground at Shenzhen City in China. A Six-Reel Shootout The FIFA dream kicks off on September 26th. Players from around the world will compete in a stadium shootout to secure a date with glory in the new FIFA Dream Matches mode. As the first in the new tournament of tournaments, it features 24 teams, each with four real players from different countries and continents. Each nation has a goalkeeper, making a total of 48 players on the pitch. Fans in each country can choose one of the four players to control their team, giving them the chance to guide their player through a series of FIFA 22 challenges. The goal of the game is for each team to score the most goals in each scenario. To win the tournament, a team must score 20 goals with the same player playing all four roles; a feat which has never been achieved in FIFA before. The new tournament will take place in the Virtual Stadium at the brand-new EA SPORTS FIFA World Cup 18 Stadium. Players can be any nationality but the game will use real-life

EA SPORTS FIFA is the most authentic simulation of the beautiful game and FIFA is the most authentic simulation of the beautiful game. Gameplay The real player movement, control and feel of FIFA are captured to provide a more realistic football experience. The gameplay flow and fluidity of players is authentic and players react realistically to contact and off the ball incidents. The skills of players and the unpredictability of momentum-driven matches are also simulated as they would be in the real world. The most powerful engine in football simulation history drives every aspect of the gameplay experience, from ball physics and the momentum created when players collide, to how players’ skill levels, attributes, stamina, fitness and aging impact their performances. The engine also simulates realistic crowd behaviour and dynamic environment factors, including pitch conditions, weather and lighting. Innovations The series’ innovative gameplay improves upon what has come before, introducing new elements and enhancements that have never been tried before in football simulation. From introducing teamwork and the pass and through ball to the return of off the ball skill moves, reaction times are always more accurate and speed is faster. Closed loop gameplay challenges players to anticipate the ball to create a more realistic and challenging game. Responsible gameplay keeps players accountable and rewarded for their decisions – such as under pressure situations – and creates a more intense and immersive experience. The technology also captures the speed of play, which allows players to more accurately control and manipulate the ball, making it easier for them to pass, shoot and receive. Play modes The core gameplay of FIFA remains the same, but there are a number of fun new modes that are expected to excite new and returning fans alike. FIFA Ultimate Team™, allowing fans to create their ultimate team with all players and kits from the last 25 seasons of FIFA in a brand-new twist on popular sports gameplay. Play more matches, make more trades, and now use all the players in your Ultimate Team. Earn better items by playing better matches and completing your team’s progressive challenges. FIFA Ultimate Team™ includes a new seasons mode where you build your club from the ground up, starting with your initial squad, through to your most developed side. It also features new multiplayer balance, where you can play with the best team from other regions, including the new Premier League 2™. New Career Mode simulates a typical player’s
