I've had ShellExView for a while now, but just decided to download a different utility that reads more on.tib files with more options than ShellExView. I'm making a program called "Super Tooltip" that solves this problem. It scans the page in Chrome, Firefox, Edge and IE and displays the extension information to the user. I have the full demo from Google, so you can see it work, but it could be possible to just get the extension info, not the whole page in Google Chrome and... I started looking for the best extension that I could use for this program when I came across the ShellExView utility which is intended for exactly what I needed. It has a great interface and I would recommend this great utility to everyone. It's a lot more than just an extension viewer, but its core functionality is that it can search for any extensions installed on a computer, along with any associated installed.NET extensions, which means you can get a better idea of what the extension does if it has any.NET components.

INTRODUCTION {#sec1-1} ===== Toxocara canis is a roundworm measuring up to 4 mm in length that may infect various animals including humans, including cats. It is accidentally ingested with food contaminated by manure from dogs or cats and then spread by migration of larvae in feces. Eggs hatch into larvae when transferred to a vulnerable site, including the liver, lungs, and eyes, and can be released into the host's blood. It can cause a variety of mild or severe symptoms, such as fever, malaise, vomiting, abdominal pain, headache, eosinophilia, pulmonary symptoms, and retinal lesions. In some cases, it may have harmful effects on lung and liver. \[[@ref1][@ref2]\] The disease is important and is often underdiagnosed as it is difficult to diagnose. The delayed diagnosis can lead to serious complications, including blindness, epilepsy, and neurological impairment. CASE REPORT {#sec1-2} ===== A 2-year-old girl, weighing
