Q: How to implement a refresh, and also some time delay in a directive? I have a directive with a timeout of 2 seconds. But it seems it will throw a refresh on each image. So, how can I achieve this that, it only refresh when I press some button? `app.directive('greenimage', function() { return { restrict: 'A', link: function postLink(scope, element, attrs) { scope.$watch(function() { return element[0].src; }, function (src) { element[0].src = src; }, { immediate: true }); } } });` A: I would suggest using a simple call, if you want to delay the call, using `$timeout`, or if you really don't want a call you can use `requestAnimationFrame()`. This will allow you to do something like this: `scope.$watch(function() { return element[0].src; }, function (src) { element[0].src = src; }, { immediate: true });`
