Age and gender variations in glucose and insulin responses to an oral glucose challenge in children and adolescents with cystic fibrosis. Paediatric cystic fibrosis (CF) is associated with impaired glucose tolerance (IGT) and insulin resistance (IR). The aim of this study was to compare insulin and glucose responses to an oral glucose tolerance test (OGTT) in a paediatric CF cohort across different age groups. A cross-sectional study was performed using a single OGTT in a heterogeneous population of children and adolescents with CF. A total of 58 patients (37 males) with an age range of 6-17 years completed the study. There were four age groups: aged 6-8, 9-11, 12-14 and 15-17 years. Homeostasis model assessment of insulin resistance (HOMA-IR) and Matsuda insulin sensitivity (Matsuda ISI) indices were calculated. Glucose and insulin responses were measured using a commercially available kit. The youngest age group (age 6-8 years) was observed to have the highest HOMA-IR and Matsuda ISI indices, showing an increased IR compared to other age groups. The 15-17-year-old group also demonstrated a significantly higher HOMA-IR index compared to all other age groups. Male patients in the 15-17-year-old age group had a significantly higher HOMA-IR index compared to their female counterparts. In contrast, female patients showed a significantly higher Matsuda ISI index compared to males in all age groups except the oldest. The older CF patients have more significant IR compared to younger patients. Insulin resistance is more pronounced in patients ≥15 years of age and females.From here to there and on to somewhere September 2, 2012 Summer cruise, anyone? It doesn't look so bad, but for those of us who live in the Deep South, this is approaching the time when the outside temperatures start to feel kind of chilly. We generally get a few autumnal flurries every year, but the last couple have been more like fountains. And that's mostly because the first frost has passed. I don't remember last year being quite so late. However, we did have a cool but lovely summer. It is kind of hard to put into words what I'm looking forward to about fall. Some friends have prepared a list, and it is quite a mix.
