Neurotoxicity caused by chemotherapy is a common complication of cancer treatment that can lead to disability. Recently, growing evidence has shown that chemotherapy-induced peripheral neuropathy (CIPN) is also a chronic neuropathy, causing pain, abnormal sensation and other symptoms, which can last for several years after chemotherapy, not only in adults but also in children. This study aimed to investigate the effects of low-dose recombinant human erythropoietin (rhEPO) on CIPN in children. Eighty-six children with CIPN who were treated with chemotherapy including melphalan, carboplatin, cyclophosphamide and etoposide (MEC) (43 cases), etoposide, cyclophosphamide and cisplatin (EC) (38 cases) and etoposide and cisplatin (EP) (9 cases) were enrolled. Children were divided into 4 groups. Group 1 (n = 15) received rhEPO 100 IU/kg/day for 15 days (as a short-term treatment) and group 2 (n = 15) received rhEPO 100 IU/kg/day for 30 days (as a short-term treatment). Group 3 (n = 15) received rhEPO 50 IU/kg/day for 15 days and group 4 (n = 11) received rhEPO 50 IU/kg/day for 30 days. The degree of sensory and motor impairment was assessed using the Chemotherapy-induced Peripheral Neuropathy (CIPIN) Scale. Thirteen items of the CIPIN Scale were evaluated: sensory impairment (joint), motor impairment, motor dysfunction (muscle), motor sensory impairment, paresthesia, light touch (surface), vibration, pinprick, proprioception, ankle reflex, pin grasp, heel-shin pinch and toe-touche. After a 15-day treatment with rhEPO 100

The "Three witches" of the famous painting by Hans Holbein serve as a metaphor for the "three witches" of commerce, finance and bureaucracy -- the IMF, the Fed and the World Bank. The three witches sit on a broomstick and are ready to let fly their spells on the world economy. I have no doubt in my mind that Germany's Bundesbank is getting ready to do the same thing to the euro. And Europe as a whole is getting ready to let the black arts conjure up a third consecutive down week for the euro. In a story in the German newspaper Frankfurter Allgemeine Sonntagszeitung this weekend, the conversation of "the Derogator" is currently focused on the ECB's dalliance with quantitative easing. The Derogator runs a website called eurozone-is-tottering.de which is an alternative to voxEuropensis. He argues that the ECB is just being an arbitrary bunch of numerate bureaucrats at a time when they are supposed to have rejected the concept of QE outright. Mr Derogator was speaking to the FT and the FT is not printing his words in its German edition. But the Derogator's words appeared on the web and are being passed around. A reprint from yesterday is as follows: "The ECB's QE policy is arbitrary because the condition for it being conducted is not the level of inflation in the euro-zone; it's the balance of payments situation. This is not a valid condition for QE." (The FT is now quoting the Derogator, but they have omitted the reference to the balance of payments situation). This is a major screw-up on behalf of the FT and the FT is fully to blame. It chose to publish an interview with the Derogator when he was talking about the wrong subject (the balance of payments situation) and also when he was using the wrong word (QE). The FT must have assumed that I was going to get to the QE issue later in the interview. And while I was talking about it, I must have asked the Derog d0c515b9f4
