These tutorials will walk you through the basics of Photoshop and teach you how to use essential skills for your Photoshop workflow. One of the most popular ways to use Photoshop is to take a photo (or grab one from stock photography), crop it, and add text. For this, start by making sure your camera's manual settings are set to whatever you'd like, and open up the photo in Photoshop. The first step is to enable Photoshop's automatic Crop Tool. Click on the blue Crop Tool button in the toolbox at the top of the Photoshop window, and then choose the "Automatically Crop the Whole Photo" option. You'll also need to make sure your "Lens Corrections" option is checked in the Crop Tools panel. If it isn't, click the icon with the plus sign to the left of it. Having done that, you can use the Crop Tool to crop around a subject or a specific area of the image, dragging diagonally to the right to make a square around an object. This is a very basic crop, but can be used to get the basic framing of a photograph. If you're using stock images, you can find cheaper options on Shutterstock. In addition to the Basic Crop, you can make your image better by applying some basic image editing techniques. To do so, click on the Layers icon at the bottom of the window, and then click the icon with the downward arrow to the right of the icon, and choose the "New Adjustment Layer" option. If you have other adjustments already set on the image, make sure they're saved first. Below the Layers menu, you'll see the few basics of the Photoshop Adjustment Layers. As you know, the image has a background that's usually black or white, and it can be edited using the toolbox of options. This includes things such as adding shadows, boosting an image's exposure, or applying a color tint. The Adjustment layers let you tweak these different areas to your heart's content. By clicking on the Layers icon, you'll be able to rename the new layer, or choose from the preset layers, which include "Shadow," "Highlight," "Color," "Grayscale," "Chromatic Aberration," "Vignette," and "Film Grain." If you just want to add a little visual interest and warmth, change the film grain setting to a warmer one.

Ingestion of starch improves de novo lipogenesis in humans. Starch is an important energy source in the human diet, however, the metabolic effects of starch in humans are not completely understood. Here we evaluated the effect of starch, wheat starch and a polysaccharide-containing food on de novo lipogenesis in humans. Six healthy subjects were fed 4 g/kg body weight starch (total starch intake = 23 g/meal) for 6 wk in a randomized, crossover design. Subjects had a low- and high-carbohydrate, low-fat diet during the first and second 4 wk of starch feeding. Respiration quotient, the area under the curve of 2-h plasma insulin levels, and the area under the curve of insulin-like growth factor-1 levels during an oral glucose tolerance test were not significantly different before and after the starch feeding. After starch feeding, the endogenous nonoxidative and oxidative de novo lipogenesis from fatty acids were increased by 13% and 30%, respectively. These results indicate that starch promotes nonoxidative and oxidative de novo lipogenesis from fatty acids in humans.

FORT WORTH — Four months after an in-home shooting claimed the life of her husband, Darlene Opinione, now 54, and three-year-old son, Jimmy, were forced to leave their Fort Worth home. In order to survive, the family of five slept in a truck for a month before moving in with Opinione's mother, "Miss Betty." But there are more changes in the forecast. Next month, Opinione will relocate her family — including a 3-year-old daughter she had with her ex-husband — to North Carolina to reunite with her parents. "They told us to go back where we came from," Opinione said Friday from a North Carolina rehab center. "But that's not my home. I'm not going back to Texas." She will rejoin her three adult children there — in Lumberton, N.C. — once she's on her feet. Opinione believes she was shot and wounded by her ex-husband, Patrice Opinione — who authorities say committed suicide in the evening hours of Nov. 23. But that's a story that remains unclear. Readers comment The outcome of the

Q: How to update Array in UserDefaults? I need to store values in an UserDefaults. The data gets stored successfully but when I'm trying to update the data, it doesn't work. The code looks like this: `int wordCount; [NSUserDefaults standardUserDefaults]; NSMutableArray *words = [[NSMutableArray alloc] init]; NSMutableArray *words2; [NSUserDefaults setObject:words2 forKey:@"words"]; [NSUserDefaults synchronize]; NSString *test = [NSString stringWithFormat:@"%i", wordCount]; NSLog(test); //should print the value of wordCount but it's always zero.`

A: You are creating a new array instead of reusing the same one that you stored in UserDefaults. You should instead do this: `NSMutableArray *words2 = [[NSMutableArray alloc] init]; [NSUserDefaults setObject:words2 forKey:@"words"]; [NSUserDefaults synchronize];` The values stored in UserDefaults are not copied, so they just get cloned.

Q: Creating New Columns Based on Different Criteria of Two Columns at Once I'm trying to create new columns in a table based on a change in one column and the value of another column. So if this table is filled with data: Name Time1 Time2 Joe 7:59 8:00 Jill 9:10 Peter What I want the output to be is: Name Time1 Time2 1_Diff 2_Diff Joe 7:59 8:00 -30 1 Jill 9:10 -3 Peter
